

Advisory & Membership Services

Eurofins Technical also offers confidential legal and technical advice, analytical resources and third party independent inspections.

With more than twenty years unrivalled experience in providing tailored expert legal advice and information on all aspects of UK and EU legislation in relation to the food industry, Eurofins is renowned for providing world class testing and advisory services.

Why Eurofins? With Scientists, Technologists, former Trading Standards Officers and Environmental Health Officers, the team is uniquely qualified to review authority, industry and consumer legal, technical and policy data in order to provide practical, commercial and timely advice.

Eurofins maintains links with all major retailers and are able to provide advice in their particular technical protocols.

We are also able to provide advice and guidance on sustainability and traceability of ingredients as well as their authenticity.

As a commercial organisation, we understand the need for a rapid response and can process routine enquiries within a day. With Eurofins you also have the advantage of our enforcement experience without the risk of prosecution.

Recognising that our clients require varying levels of assistance or advice, we can respond on an 'ad-hoc' basis for one off or short pieces of work, or alternatively, we offer a range of membership services, be it on a project by project basis or frequent quick questions. Our membership schemes provide organisations with access to consultation time with our advisory team that everyone within your business can utilise, wherever they are located.

As part of the service, your organisation will receive weekly bulletins on industry developments and changes in legislation and preferential rates on scheduled training courses.
